

Juliet Silverton

Since 2004, I have been a Head in three very different schools in three local authorities in the West Midlands, the largest of which was a four form entry in Coventry, where the performance was turned around in three years. All of these schools have had challenging contexts and it has been a privilege to be a part of their journey, and acknowledge the level of drive and commitment that the staff and children demonstrated in their pursuit of raising expectations.

More recently I worked for Coventry City Council Local Authority, as Head of Improvement and Standards, across all of its Primary, Secondary and Special Schools. This enabled me to experience a wider strategic role and be part of a team that took the overall percentage of pupils attending good or outstanding schools to 95%.

My passion is school improvement, focusing on developing and supporting others to facilitate positive change, for all.
